131 "AS THE OLD SANG SO PIPE THE YOUNG"

A family gathering about the dining table, on which are the remains of a repast. While the adult members are singing, the youngsters are playing various instruments, from a bagpipe to a whistle; general hilarity prevails, though a fat old individual in monk-like costume, and also the cat he holds and a dog, do not appear to relish the tune. A mirror against the ornate wall reflects the grandmother, who is singing from the sheet of music held by the grandfather, the two together leading the gaiety of the party. The mother at the left is attired in a low corsage, displaying an opulent bosom. Characteristic interior of the well-to-do middle class.
